1. INTRODUCTION

The Institution has a long history of making awards and some fine traditions have been developed over many years. These traditions should be maintained and extended to honour contributions of members and to promote civil engineering.

This document explains the awards structure and defines the occasions where the awards will be conferred. In some case special awards ceremonies will be arranged. Arrangements for such ceremonies should be discussed with the National Office Marketing and PR Department.

2. OBJECTIVES

Awards should be viewed as one of the means for achieving Institutional objectives, namely:

- to promote the art and science of civil engineering
- to promote the profession, and
- to protect the justifiable interests of its members

In addition, awards should provide full and proper recognition for the achievements of members.

Awards can contribute to the realisation of these objectives by:

- providing an incentive to members to increase the standard of civil engineering in South Africa and by acknowledging achievements in this regard.
- providing a means for recognising the engineering contributions of members to the profession, to the Institution and to society.
- providing a medium for extending public awareness of the role of civil engineering in society and of the contributions made by civil engineers.

3. STRATEGY

The system of awards should contribute to Institutional objectives, taking cognisance of other corporate activities and the resources available. Awards should be given to individuals, groups of individuals or projects for outstanding performance such as advancing technology, teaching, research, engineering construction or management.

While outstanding performances should be identified and rewarded, special attention must be given to a limited number of prestigious awards. Care should be taken not to create meaningless awards.

Presentation of awards should be arranged to realise their maximum public relations value and to suitably honour their recipients. The form of awards should therefore provide lasting recognition and be suited to the recipients and to the performance. The human element should be emphasised at all times, and in the case of awards for projects, the engineer behind the project should also be recognised. There should also be significant input in nominated projects from SAICE members.

4. AWARDS STRUCTURE

Although they are closely related, awards may be divided into two main categories, viz, people awards and project awards. As a general rule, people awards should be in the form of medals or certificates while project awards should be certificates and/or plaques.

4.1 People Awards

- 4.1.1 The Gold Medal is the premier personal award for outstanding contributions in civil engineering both in the technical and professional fields.

- 4.1.2 Honorary Fellowships should be conferred on those who have made notable contributions to the advancement of civil engineering in South Africa and may include non-members of the SAICE.
- 4.1.3 The President's Award for Meritorious Service should be to a person or persons who in the opinion of the President have rendered excellent service to the Institution or the Profession.
- 4.1.4 In addition to the above Institution awards, the Technical Divisions make a number of people awards:
- Geotechnical Medal - Geotechnical Division
 - Chairman's Awards for Meritorious Service to the Transportation Engineering Profession – Division of Transportation Engineering
 - Water Engineering Award – Division of Water Engineering
- 4.1.6 Awards are made to "Persons" of the year in 10 categories and form part of the annual Awards competition and are presented at the Annual Awards Function.

4.2 Project Awards

- 4.2.1 The premier project award is for "The Most Outstanding Civil Engineering Achievement" in 5 categories.

5. CONTROL

All matters pertaining to Institution awards are under the control of the Events Committee, while Branch and Division awards are under the direct control of the unit involved.

It is, however, required that details of these awards should be sent to the Events Committee for record, review, and to ensure wide media coverage.

6. ADJUDICATION

The nominations for each award should be considered and adjudicated by the appropriate person, panel or committee.

7. PRESENTATION OF AWARDS

In order to gain the maximum benefit from making awards, careful consideration should be given to the presentation of awards. Some awards are of interest to a wide spectrum of people, while others are only of importance within the Institution. This distinction is the main criterion for determining the method of presentation. Different occasions present opportunities for handing over awards and should be used as follows for Institutional awards:

7.1 Presidential Inauguration

The Presidential Inauguration will take place at the end of the year when any accepted nominations for the Gold Medal and Honorary Fellowships will be presented in front of an invited audience of public figures and members of the Institution.

7.2 National Awards Function

The National Awards Function will take place in the second half of the year when the premier awards with public interest will be presented in the presence of an invited audience of public figures and members of the Institution. The awards most suitable for presentation at this function are:

- The Award for the Most Outstanding Civil Engineering Achievement (Technical Excellence Projects) in the sub disciplines or categories Civil Engineering Projects , Structural/Building Projects and Rehabilitation/Reinstatement Projects

- The Award for the Most Outstanding Civil Engineering Achievement (Community-Based Projects)
- The Award for the Most Outstanding Civil Engineering Achievement (International Projects)
- The Award for the Most Outstanding Civil Engineering Achievement (Reports, Studies and Investigations)
- Various People Awards for Graduate/Young/Senior in categories (Engineer/Technologist/Technician) and Project Manager.

The Presidents Award for Meritorious Service is made by the outgoing President

7.3 Annual General Meeting

This is the occasion where the Institution meets to review its affairs and is appropriate for the recognition of achievements within the profession. Currently no awards or presentations are made at the AGM.

7.4 Branch/Regional Awards

These presentations should either be made at a special function sponsored by the recipients, at the Branch/Regional annual dinner, or at their AGM provided it is held prior to the National Awards event. These awards are currently discontinued as branches are not receiving sufficient entries to hold meaningful events.

7.5 Divisional Awards

Divisional awards should be presented at either a special function or the Division AGM.

8 PREVIOUS AWARD WINNERS

8.1 MEMBERS WHO HAVE RECEIVED THE GOLD MEDAL AWARD

Year	Recipient
2019	Neil Macleod
